About Clare Truman

Clare has been teaching for eleven years and specialising in autism for eight. In January 2017, she established Spectrum Space Community Interest Company, a social enterprise and alternative education provision based in Surrey which specialises in supporting autistic children who display Pathological Demand Avoidance. She is also big sister to an autistic young man.

Clare is currently completing a PhD at the Centre for Research in Autism and Education at UCL London. Her research compares the educational experiences of autistic children with and without a diagnosis of Pathological Demand Avoidance. Prior to this she completed her BA in Education Studies at Cambridge University and her PGCE and MA at the Institute of Education in London. Both in teaching and research her main interest is supporting those children whose complex autism makes it difficult to access school.

Training and Consultancy

Bespoke training and consultancy for those supporting autistic children and young people who find it difficult to access school.

Supporting school staff

Topics covered include:

- Autistic Spectrum Conditions
- Autism and Anxiety
- Pathological Demand Avoidance
- Designing a child led curriculum
- Measuring progress using a child led curriculum
- Managing difficult behaviour

Supporting families

All the above topics can be adapted for groups of parents and carers. Discounts are available for not-for-profit organisations supporting families.

Families can also benefit from consultancy in person, by telephone or using Skype. Discounts are available for parents and carers using this service.

Education Consultancy

We can support school leaders, class teachers and support staff to find solutions to challenges they are facing working with individual students who struggle to access school.

Consultancy can be arranged face to face, over the telephone or over Skype.
